

Students learn about graduate school programs

The fifth annual Graduate School Information Day, sponsored by the Counseling and Placement Center Nov. 18, drew 227 Gallaudet students who were interested in obtaining information about graduate programs around the country.

Students had the opportunity to learn about 15 different graduate programs. Eight graduate programs sent representatives to Gallaudet, while others sent information that was distributed to interested students. The eight schools represented were Gallaudet, Western Maryland College, University of Rochester, American University, Boston University, New York University, University of North Florida and California State University, Northridge.

In addition to receiving information from various colleges and universities, students were able to obtain information on the GRE, GMAT and MAT which was distributed by staff of the Counseling and Placement Center, a unit of Student Affairs.

Students who were unable to attend the Graduate School Information Day and are interested in obtaining information on applying to graduate school are encouraged to go to the Counseling and Placement Center on the second floor of Ely Center for assistance. 214-68-9014.

Workshop to help deaf women and rehab. counselors

Helping develop ways to change attitudes, knowledge and behavior of both school and rehabilitation counselors and the deaf women clients they serve will be the focus of a special workshop to be held in Ely Center this Wednesday, Dec. 8.

The workshop will be attended by about 50 women and men, both deaf and hearing, including school and rehabilitation counselors, professionals and other people connected with deafness. During the day they will participate in brainstorming sessions to look at issues in deaf women's lives and to see how counselors can work with deaf women more effectively.

The workshop is really part of a larger project to develop materials that will be disseminated to both deaf women and counselors. This fall, a Department of Counseling proposal on "Expanding Occupational Options for Deaf Women" was one of only two proposals to receive funding from the Department of Education through its Women's Educational Equity Act Program. This program, over the years, has supported universities and other agencies who want to develop materials for specific populations. Gallaudet's is the first deafness-related proposal to receive such funding.

Marita Danek and Fran White, both assistant professors in the Department of Counseling, are the project director and project coordinator. Also working with the project are Teena Wax and Roger Beach of the Counseling Department. Research Specialist Pam Getson will be the project evaluator.

Following the workshop, Danek, White and others working with the project will begin putting together the materials, which will probably include two videotapes and a workbook for deaf women and one videotape and two workbooks for school and rehabilitation counselors.

At the workshop, the keynote address will be given by Barbara Harslem, vice president for Institutional Advancement. During the morning, six small groups will discuss attitudes, knowledge and behavior for counselors and for clients. During the afternoon, two groups will focus on counselors and clients.

Danek emphasized that they were approaching the workshop with no fixed ideas and that participants would help determine what materials needed to be developed. After the materials are developed next semester, they will be field tested next summer.

MSSD Theatre—seeing is believing

by Nancy Connors

Tim McCarty of MSSD's Theatre Arts Department says that "A lot of people don't come to our productions because they think that it is just 'high school kids' . . . then once they do come, they are hooked!"

There is a lot for both audience and student to get hooked on in Theatre Arts at MSSD. Years of planning and play production have evolved into a full curriculum of eight elective courses. An MSSD student is required to take a minimum of two elective courses before graduation. Performing Arts courses cover the gamut of work involved in putting together a production.

Introduction to Play Production may fulfill an English credit or a Performing Arts credit. Other courses are Body Movement, Scene Interpretation and Technical Theatre I & II. Dance Technique, and Discover with Dance may be selected to fulfill the Physical Education credit or Performing Arts, and the Music course may fulfill either a Communication or a Performing Arts requirement.

Through the curriculum and the regular schedule of productions, MSSD is developing a core group of students and faculty who really understand the business and teamwork of the theatre.

For each presentation, students and faculty members work together both in front of the audience and behind the scenes. Make-up, wardrobe, scenery, lights and sound all must be developed and designed for each production. The months of preparation teach each member the meaning of responsibility and commitment.

"You can only miss rehearsal if you are dead," says McCarty. "On time means 15 minutes early so that you can warm up and be ready." Teamwork comes above the desires of the individual. "I have a friend visiting on campus" is not an acceptable excuse for deserting the other team members at rehearsal or a work session, says McCarty. Students have an enforced responsibility to the group.

The result of the discipline is that "seeing is believing." The quality of the MSSD productions are neither luck nor the work of one or two talented people. This year's schedule will show the audience the work of at least 100 people, hours of rehearsals and weeks of classes.

All students are invited to audition for the MSSD productions. This year four different presentations have been scheduled. The fall production, a group of one-act plays, included the "Ugly Duckling" by A.A. Milne and "African Folk Tales." This production is now available as part of the repertoire of shows that can be presented when the troupe is invited to perform at other schools or locations around the city.

The second Dance Concert to be produced by the department will be held Dec. 9-11 in the MSSD auditorium. Marcia Freeman, dance instructor/choreographer, is creating one of the dances for the concert. A Rock Concert scheduled for March will be a forum for what students have learned through the music program designed by Norman Lederman and Karen Semanchik (OTG-Nov. 22). Eric Malzkuhn, director and sign language adaptor, and Emmitt Woodey, technical director and designer, will begin shortly on the finale of the season—the Spring Production opening on May 5, 1983.

So when you are thinking of adding some culture to your life, include the productions of MSSD on your calendar. 018-42-2205.

Lunch specials in Alumni House

Several Tuesday specials for lunch are planned in the Alumni House.

On Dec. 7, hot roast beef sandwich, whipped potatoes, green beans, roll and beverage will be served for $3. No other sandwiches will be available, but the regular soup and salad bar will be served.

On Dec. 14, the 25th customer will receive a free lunch for himself/herself and a guest.

Homemade cookies will be sold Dec. 21 at $1.25 a dozen.

Don't forget to look for your Social Security number in this issue. If it's one of the 15 listed, you're entitled to a free lunch in the Alumni House between Dec. 7-13. To claim your lunch, stop by the Alumni House or call Annette at x5277 voice or Mary Anne at x5105 TDD.

Home ec. students attend meeting

Fourteen home economics students at Gallaudet who have been taking the Preschool Practicum course here attended the National Association for the Education of Young Children Convention at the Washington Hilton Hotel Nov. 12 and 13.

Instructor Jean Edwards gave a videotape presentation on the program and discussed the work of her students, who have been working with hearing children in daycare centers through Catholic Charities Model Cities Center. The program, which began six years ago, aims to put children in a helping position, abolish prejudices and develop empathy, altruism and self-confidence through unique teaching methods and innovative modes of communication.

Many of the participants at the convention expressed a desire to purchase the videotape, the Gallaudet students were offered jobs, and many people encouraged Edwards to take the program to Chicago in March.

On the videotape, Denis Antoine, Rudy Hutchison and Arminda White of Catholic Charities Model Cities Center spoke of the many contributions the Gallaudet students have made during the past six years in the growth and development of the children. A computer search of literature shows that there is no research on the contributions that a hearing impaired caretaker can make to children, and the program invited more research in this area.

The convention was attended by about 14,000 people. Some of the Preschool Practicum students said they felt very positive about their careers after they attended the convention. 002-34-4046.

Crafts sale

A stained glass and fiber arts crafts show and sale, to benefit Close-Up students, will be held at both MSSD and KDES.

Marilyn Nugent, Alyce Neukirk and Diane Adams will display and sell their works in the main lobby of MSSD on Dec. 8 and 9 from 11:45 a.m.-1:20 p.m. The show will be held in the main hall of Kendall on Dec. 9 from 11:30 a.m.-1 p.m.

Studio prices will prevail, and custom orders will be accepted. 577-74-0556.

The Pas-A-Pas Club

by David de Lorenzo

In the latter part of the 19th century, clubs for the deaf sprang up around the country. Generally, each club offered social activities and was a meeting place for the deaf people of the community to come together. Most clubs offered annually a theater production, ball and picnic. Most invited guest speakers and had literary divisions for those with creative impulses. A popular activity of the clubs was bicycling or "racycling" as it was commonly called back then. The clubs went on racycling outings to various locations around their communities. In The Silent Worker, there are numerous articles and photographs regarding these outings.

One of the largest and most well-known clubs of the 1890s was the Pas-A-Pas Club of Chicago. Originally organized in 1882, the club did not attract enough members and failed to get off the ground. Due to this shaky start, when the club was organized once again in 1890, it was given the title Pas-A-Pas, meaning step by step.

The club prospered under the management of several now well-known deaf individuals, including Philip J. Hasentab and Oscar H. Regensburg. Both were graduates of Gallaudet College and quite active in the deaf community on various levels. Hasentab was the only deaf minister to the deaf in Chicago at that time, being the pastor of the M.E. Mission of the Deaf. Regensburg was a publisher of the Exponent, a newspaper for the deaf, and owned his own printing company.

The club grew to 58 members by 1892, a large number considering the charge for membership. To become a member one had to have "good moral character" but could be of "whatever nationality or creed." An initiation fee of $2 was charged plus 50¢ for dues each month. Many deaf people of Chicago did not join due to the cost. However, all balls, picnics and theater productions and lectures were open to all. In February, 1891, a ball attended by about 400 deaf people was held at the Grand Palace Hotel.

The club also provided monthly lectures on various topics. In 1891, Edward Miner Gallaudet travelled to Chicago to speak. Again in 1893, while participating in the World Congress of the Deaf, Gallaudet lectured to the club. The club, incidentally, played an active role in the social arrangements for the World Congress.

Deaf clubs, like the Pas-A-Pas Club, have always played an integral role in the deaf community. They have not only been active in providing social activities for the deaf community but have been instrumental in offering deaf people outlets for artistic expression and intellectual growth. They have always been an important voice regarding the social, economic and educational concerns in the deaf community. For these reasons, the history of clubs for the deaf is an essential component of the social history of the deaf community in the United States.

Faculty-staff open house

All faculty and staff members are invited to attend an open house this Wednesday, Dec. 8 at the Edward Miner Gallaudet residence to celebrate the holiday season.

The open house will be held between 9:30-11:30 a.m. and between 2:30-4:30 p.m.

Curriculum guides

The results of several years of work on the development and evaluation of curriculum materials at KDES will soon be realized. This month, KDES will begin national dissemination of curriculum guides in Language Arts, Social Studies, Science, Mathematics and Auditory Training.

The guides are the first in a series of self-contained curriculum materials to be disseminated by KDES. Each of the guides for Language Arts, Science, Social Studies and Mathematics includes a scope and sequence of objectives, suggested learning activities, resource materials and, in some cases, evaluation strategies. The guides also contain networks describing the scope and sequence of objectives for record-keeping purposes.

KDES content specialists have been writing criterion referenced test items and evaluation techniques to assess student achievement of curriculum objectives in each of the four major subjects. These items will be pilot tested in KDES classrooms and, at some point in the future, these test items and their matching objectives will be field tested in programs serving the deaf.

For more information, contact the Office of Curriculum and Evaluation, Philip Saif, x5023.

PAC

MSSD believes that parents are an integral part of education and has a strong parent education program. A successful regional parent meeting was held in Williamsburg, VA recently, and the national Parent Advisory Committee meeting was held at MSSD on Nov. 3-5. Other MSSD parent meetings are being planned. For more information, contact Nancy Cowan, x5823.

Outreach activities

Margaret Hallau of IDEC and Pam Perone of KDES Middle School presented workshops on reading for the staff of the Virginia School for the Deaf in Hampton and Staunton as part of continuing Outreach assistance in curriculum implementation at both schools.

KDES Counselor Richard White presented a workshop for parents at the Louisiana School for the Deaf and Blind in Baton Rouge.

Lynne Gelzer of KDES, Jim Vincent of MSSD and Leslie Proctor of Demonstration Programs gave a presentation on career education for parents at the recent state conference for Ohio Resource Centers for Low Incidence and Handicapping Conditions hosted by the Ohio School for the Deaf. Jo Israelson of Outreach and Carol Beckman of MSSD presented a career education workshop for teachers at the same conference. Vic Galloway from the Texas School for the Deaf was the guest speaker. These workshops are the first in a series of state-level workshops sponsored by ORCLHC for teachers of the hearing impaired.

Debbie Pollicove, coordinator of Outreach Affiliated School Programs, met with supervisors of the hearing impaired in the state of Ohio to present a workshop on the process of curriculum development.

Esther Harrison of KDES presented a workshop to teachers and counselors of the hearing impaired in Ohio on parent involvement and attitudes. This was the first part of a two part workshop aimed at professionals working with parents in Ohio.

Jo Israelson met with the superintendent, language committee and program supervisors of the Columbus Hearing Impaired Program in Columbus, OH to review current work on various projects and to assist in further implementation of the five-year plan for change in the school program.

Max and Della Fitz-Gerald of MSSD met with the advisory committee at the Sterck School in Delaware as part of the ongoing Outreach project in sex education at that school.

Julia Stovall and Glenda Ennis of Outreach held planning meetings with the Kellogg coordinators at the Wisconsin School for the Deaf and the Sir James Whitney School in Canada to arrange for Outreach assistance for the 1982-83 school year.

Cindy Rohr of MSSD presented a workshop on rewriting materials to teachers in the Atlanta, GA public schools.

Jo Israelson and the Career Education team from KDES (Margaret Simpson, Jerry Spense, Heidi Dexheimer, Ken Tiktin and Lynne Gelzer) participated in a career education and training workshop in Wilson, NC in cooperation with NTID. 027-40-0418.

A Message from the President

A student-centered campus

Faculty, staff and administrators have much to occupy their minds. Faculty members need to follow developments in their respective fields of interest and, if possible, make contribution to these fields. Faculty also have class preparations as well as committee meetings. Staff responsibilities range from those which facilitate the work of other people and students to those responsibilities that directly assist students. Administrators are involved in everything from planning buildings to reviewing and implementing policies and providing some measure of leadership for the unit or units for which they are responsible. All of these activities by faculty, staff and administrators would be superficial, indeed, if they did not focus on the central purpose of the College—providing the best possible education for hearing impaired students.

The above statement is obvious, but it has implications for all of us.

If students are the central focus of Gallaudet College, when was the last time you passed the time of day with one? Have you accepted invitations to participate in student-sponsored activities? Do you know the officers of the Student Body Government by name and some of their major projects this year? Did you attend the SBG Open

Dance workshop

A dance/theatre work in progress by Graceann Adamo will be presented Thursday, Dec. 16 at 8 p.m. in the Ely Center Auditorium.

The work features the improvisational responses of 12 men and women to a series of directed tasks. The result is, to some extent, unique with each performance. Choreographer Adamo says, "The work illuminates the processes by which we enter into war."

The performance is free to Gallaudet students, faculty and staff with ID. The suggested donation for others is $3. For additional information, contact Adamo at 345-8826 or Bruce White (one of the performers) of the Gallaudet English Department, x5494 TDD.

House recently? Have you visited the SBG offices? Have you invited student opinion on issues occurring in your area of interest?

I look forward to my involvement with students and only wish it could be more. I get real help from the Student Advisory Board to the President and frequent contacts with SBG. I also enjoy social activities with fraternities, sororities and other groups.

My purpose in pointing this up is merely to share with you one of the deep pleasures of serving at Gallaudet College. We have some great young people here who will, in all probability, far out-perform us in the future when they assume a wide variety of responsibilities and go into very diverse occupations. Don't miss an opportunity to socialize with them, share your views with them, agree or disagree with them, challenge them and find friends among them.

Ramon Cardenas of the National Economic and Development Authority in the Philippines presents an "Ang Puso" ("from the heart") award to Frances Parsons. Cardenas represented the Southeast Asian Institute for the Deaf in presenting awards to Gallaudet for its work in training Peace Corps volunteers and to Parsons for helping establish the SAID school for deaf students. 325-38-1651.

Among Ourselves

"Gallaudet College: A Close Look at a Unique Institution" was among a series of topics during the National Conference on Student Services, Nov. 11-14, 1982, at Crystal City Hyatt Regency in Washington, D.C. Gallaudet personnel conducting the seminar were Frank Turk, Steve Weiner, Sue Lyon, Norma Buemi, and Sharon Hayes, all from the Division of Student Affairs.

Boris Bogatz chaired a presentation at the 9th annual TASH (The Association for the Severely Handicapped) conference, held in Denver, CO Nov. 4-6. Sharing the presentation entitled "Improving the Effectiveness and Efficiency of Providing Services to Hearing Impaired Developmentally Disabled Persons" was Tom Jones of Gallaudet's Education Department.

Francis Duffy, assistant professor of Educational Administration in the Department of Administration of the School of Education and Human Services, presented a workshop on instructional supervision at the Eastern Regional Conference on the Education of the Deaf (ERCED) in Elizabeth, NJ on Nov. 12. The workshop was part of a full-day program co-sponsored by the Marie H. Katzenbach School for the Deaf and the Bergen County Special Services School District. The major purpose of the conference was to provide approximately 500 participants with information regarding current trends in the education of deaf children.

William Moses, Gilbert Eastman and Victoria Brown of the Theatre Arts Department presented a lecture/workshop at Yale University Nov. 6 for the annual convention of the National Association of Drama Therapy. Their presentation was entitled "Visual Gestural Communication: A Tool for Developmental Drama."

Sy Dubow, Mary-Jean Sweeney and Sarah Bond of the National Center for Law and the Deaf presented a workshop before 200 lawyers during the American Bar Association-Young Lawyers Division Affiliate Outreach Program meeting in New York City. The Nov. 5 presentation encouraged local affiliates of the Young Lawyers Division to develop projects involving the hearing impaired community within their own geographical areas.

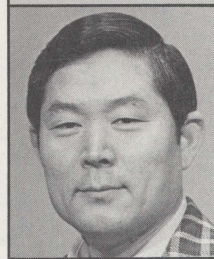

James Mahshie of the Audiology Department presented a videotape presentation entitled "Deaf Speakers' Laryngeal Behavior" at the 1982 Annual Convention of the American Speech, Language and Hearing Association, Toronto, Canada Nov. 18-21. The videotape presents findings concerning voice related speech problems of deaf individuals and video recordings of laryngeal structures during the production of speech.

Harriet Kaplan, also of the Audiology Department, presented a paper at the 1982 Annual Convention of the American Speech, Language and Hearing Association on "A Wearable Vibrotactile Aid for a Postlingually Profoundly Deafened Adult." It was found that the vibrotactile aid improved speechreading of connected material as well as perception of stress and intonation. This paper represents preliminary data in an ongoing research project.

Herbert Pearson has been named to the Board of Directors of the non-profit corporation, Prince Georgians on Camera, Inc. The corporation will manage public and educational access for Prince George's County, MD and will work closely with Storer Cable Communications and Metrovision Cable to provide public access programming for the people of Prince George's County.

International research

The U.S. Department of Education has announced Jan. 7 as the deadline for applications to its International Research and Studies Program (C.F.D.A. Number 84.017).

The Department plans to spend nearly $216,000 in Fiscal Year 1983 for this program. The program's first priorities will be to conduct research on training of foreign language and international specialists, on the skills needed to learn or teach foreign languages, on testing and measurement techniques and on the use of computers in teaching foreign languages, and to develop specialized, advanced-level materials for the teaching of less common modern foreign languages.

Women's basketball gets good start

by Mike Kaika

The women's basketball team is off to a flying start this season with a perfect 5-0 record in collegiate play. The Bisonettes, under head coach Kitty Baldrige, opened the season with a 78-43 victory over Wilson College and continued to exhibit good teamwork with wins over Goucher College and Randolph Macon Women's College.

The Bisonettes played an exhibition game on Nov. 24 against the Australian Sports Institute and lost 75-40. During the Thanksgiving weekend, the Gallaudet basketball team won the Gallaudet Invitational Tournament, defeating Anne Arundel 84-64 and Elmira College 70-62.

Baldrige has five veterans from last year's team including leading rebounders Kelli Butterworth and Sally Scannell.

Meanwhile, the men's basketball team, which has only two returning players from last year's team, is off to a shaky start with a 1-3 record as of Nov. 29. The Bison lost the season's opener to Johns Hopkins 108-76 but bounced back and defeated Howard Community College 63-60. In the men's Gallaudet Invitational the Bison lost the opening game to Montgomery 78-77. The margin of victory in this game was determined at the free throw line—Montgomery converted 20 of 28 attempts while the Bison sank on 5 of 17 shots (29%). In the consolation game, Gallaudet lost to Newport News 79-44.

Head coach Mike Rosenbaum predicts a very rough season. "We have developed a good fast break but we can't use it often unless we get the rebounds," he said. Mike Friesen (6'-3") is the tallest player on the team and this isn't very tall by college standards.
